ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.

From the Adventures of a Younger Son. REMARKABLE FURY IN A HORSE.

My first impression of its being some one in pursuit subsided, on discovering that I was between it and the tower. I endeavored to distinguish what it was, but all I could see was a silvery cloud of sand rising in a bright circle, and a dark object, at intervals, discernible. I mounted, and galloped towards it. As I advanced, I saw it was a horse running incessantly in a round. I went on, and amid the clouds of sand, I saw that the lunging and plunging of the horse was every instant more violent. My own threw up his crest, replied to his loud neighings, and pressed on; but, on approaching the object, my astonishment was raised to the highest pitch at a voice hailing me, and at beholding a man, in cavalry uniform, half covered with sand, while the sweat and blood were trickling down from his face cropped poll to his forehead and face. I shouted out,—"What is the matter?" when the horse came towards me. His large eye and expanded nostrils were of deep crimson, and the blood from several gashes on his head, neck, and flanks mingled with the white foam on his bright black skin. With erect mane and tail, and open mouth, he came to within a few yards of me. I pulled up, and drew my sabre. He then wheeled round, and making several circles within each other in rapid motion, he flung out his hind legs at the prostrate soldier, whose sword defended him with difficulty.

The horse endeavored to avoid being cut by alertness and rapidity. The saddle and harness, lying by the man, in some measure protected him. On being foiled in striking with his hind feet, the horse turned round short on his haunches, and, with startling ferocity, plunged in head foremost; like a tiger, striking with his fore feet right out, and even trying to get hold of the man with his teeth.

Here was a revolution,—the horse attempting to kill his rider, and using his armed hoofs against his head! In compliance with my spirit of freedom, I should have aided the horse, or remained neuter; but instinct impelled me to side with the biped. Pushing in to the rescue, I endeavored to get between the two, but it was no easy matter; for the horse made no attack on me; on the contrary, he used every effort to avoid my interference. I hallooed, and tried to drive him off. He repeated a hundred yards, when, as once or twice I was dismounting to succor the apparently exhausted man, he returned to the charge. However, from exertion and loss of blood, he waxed weak and less wary; so that, after many abortive attempts I succeeded in hamstringing him. He now gave one loud bellow, and strove, with a staggering gait, to gallop off, frequently falling. I followed, and had several cuts at him, till, faint from loss of blood, he fell, unable to rise.

I left him there, and went back to the man who seemed in little better condition than the horse. All I could distinguish, in answer to my speaking to him, was—"Water!—water!—water!—but I had none, nor was there any near us. The man's mouth was clotted, almost cemented with blood and sand; I wiped it and his nostrils with my jacket. Partly by signs, and partly by words, he directed me to open the holsters on his saddle. I did so and found old Falstaff's substitute for a pistol, a bottle—not of indeed of sack, but of arrack. I gave him some, and rubbed his face and head with the remainder. This restored him, when I asked him to get up and ride my horse, till we should arrive at some hut. He waved his hand, and said,—"No! I have had enough of horses to-day."

"Well, will you walk?"
"How can I?" he replied, "my leg and my left arm are cracked; or you would not have found me beaten by that brute. If you had not come up, he would have finished me. I was nearly done. I never heard of such a thing before, though I have been a rough rider to the regiment for sixteen years, and crossed all sorts and breeds of cross grained cattle. Never, till now, could one throw me from his back, without rearing, on a clean field. Then to come in upon me, like a wild beast, with hoof and tooth!—he must be mad. I hope you have killed him."

Dungaree was the nearest village. I mounted, rode thither, pressed a palanquin into service, and returned to the soldier. He was in great pain, but calmer. He told me the horse belonged to the colonel of the regiment. He had been purchased, at a great price, of an Arab; was quiet at first, but afterwards became so vicious and violent that none could mount him. "I," he continued, "undertook to tame him, or kill him, I have done my best. I tried in vain to throw down his mettle; he was not to be beaten. Deprived of his food, he was only the more furious, and watched, with wonderful cunning, every occasion of kicking and biting me. Once he got hold of me by the back, and lifted me into his manger; and if I had not been tolerably strong, and assisted by others, he would have killed me. Whenever I rode him, he used every artifice to throw me; which he had never been able to achieve till to-day, when, by violent lungings and lashing's out, he worked the saddle down to his hoofs, and, in that situation, set off at full speed, and succeeded in shaking me off. As I was lying doubled up, he broke my arm, and, I believe, my leg. Then, after going a short distance, he stopped, and wheeled round to renew the blow; I had, with great difficulty, drawn my sword; and till you, sir, came up, which was but a few minutes, he was attacking me in the way you found him.

Though I had wounded him with my sabre in many places, the devil only grew more savage. I was frightened more at his looks than at any thing else; and I do verily believe, sir, he was the devil."

Valley of Butterflies.—Between six and seven o'clock, A. M. we continued our route through woods, and large open patches of ground, and at about eleven in the forenoon, arrived at the borders of a deep glen, more wild, romantic, and picturesque, than can be perceived. It is enclosed and overhung on all sides by trees of amazing height and dimensions, which hid it in deep shadow. Fancy might picture a spot, so silent and solemn as this, as the abode of genii and fairies; every thing to render it grand, melancholy, and venerable; and the glen only wants an old dilapidated castle, a rock with a cave in it, or something of the kind to render it the most interesting place in the universe. There was one beautiful sight, however, which we would not omit mentioning for the world;—it was that of an incredible number of butterflies, fluttering about us like a swarm of bees; they had chosen this, no doubt, as a place of refuge against the fury of the elements. They were variegated by the most brilliant tints and colorings imaginable; the wings of some were of a shining green, edged and sprinkled with gold; others were of sky blue and silver; others of purple and gold delightfully blending into each other; and the wings of some were like dark velvet, trimmed and braided with lace.—Lander's Travels.

CORPORATION OF ALEXANDRIA. PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS circumstances have rendered it necessary that the Quarantine Laws of this Corporation should be carried into execution, I do therefore, by and with the advice of the Board of Health, make known the same; and Order. That all vessels coming from or touching at any ports either in the United States, British Provinces in North America, or any foreign port where the Cholera, or any other contagious disease, is known, or supposed to exist, and bound to Alexandria, be brought to anchor at the Quarantine Ground, and there to remain for the inspection and direction of the Health Officer.
I furthermore enjoin the commanders of all such vessels not to suffer any of their crew or passengers, either before or during the Quarantine Term, to go on shore, or on board any other vessel than that to which they belong, nor permit any person to come on board their vessels, except such as are employed in the execution of the Quarantine Laws, without the especial permission of the Health Officer in writing.
Doctor THOMAS SEMMES, who has been appointed Health Officer, is hereby required to cause the laws upon the subject of Quarantine to be strictly enforced.
Given under my hand this 25th day of June, 1882. JOHN ROBERTS, Mayor.
